Hi Edwin, you have been sending the e-mails to Dr. Turk, who forwarded them to me

The blood cell changes are due to chemotherapy as anticipated. Some cell groups are affected more than others so differential panel shows change commonly. As you know from previous cycles, your pre-chemo lab will determine whether you will be able to receive the next cycle on time. I hope they will be

We will give you several additional boosts of neupogen injection. Nurse will call you to arrange

Best regards,

JEFFREY ZHENG-SHENG YE MD

What do you think of the test results on the White Blood Cell Differential Panel which has varying different results for 03/15 blood test. Are those variation on blood panel from the chemo?

My next blood test is for prechemo which I will take on the 26th of April. for the the Chemotherapy appt on the 28th. You think I will be able to rebuild my white blood cell count up enough to have some reserve left in time for my next chemo appointment?

My CBC blood test are back from this morning , I noticed my WBC is 0.9 compared to 6.9 on 4/5. I did get the 5 Nuepogen shots after last week after chemo. Also my RBC is 3.42 and I see the standard is 4.10 to 5.70 M/ul.

The Platelets are at 141,,

Do you think my WBC will increase on its own ?
